What is Day 0 in Campus Placements?

Day 0 is a key and 1st milestone in the placement cycle of the academic year. It is part of phase 1,where the first set of organisations begin sharing their job descriptions (JDs) around late August to early September. While different companies may run their initial processes on varying timelines, final interviews for many are scheduled on Day 0.

This day is particularly significant because it's when several premier recruiters conduct their final rounds and make offers—often setting the tone for the rest of the placement season.

Once CPP is completed and you are enrolled into the placement cycle, the placement process unfolds in multiple stages, Let's walk through it from the beginning assuming that company X comes for hiring:

1. Resume Preparation

Before applying to any company, you must create a tailored resume. Use the resources below to guide your process:

- Some rounds might be online, monitored, or timed submissions.
- These preliminary rounds typically happen before Day 0 — in late August or early-mid September.

5. Day 0

Day 0 refers to a designated 2-day window when marquee firms (top recruiters across sectors) conduct their final interview rounds, often on campus.

- Usually scheduled for the end of September or start of October.
- If selected, you'll know your result on the same day.
- This marks the conclusion of the initial hiring phase.
