About the role

Are you intellectually curious and motivated by ideas? Do you want to create research products that are widely used by executive leaders worldwide? Gartner is searching for an India-based Research Specialist to join our global Peer and Practitioner Research team. This opportunity gives researchers an exposure to the full range of leadership-level strategic and management topics. The Specialist will be responsible for investigating, analyzing and writing on critical issues facing senior executives in leading global corporations. This individual will work on a wide range of written deliverables that require (but not limited to) qualitative research methods - interview executives at leading global corporations, conduct wide-ranging secondary literature searches and synthesize information to elicit key insights - to help organizations transform the way they operate. The Specialist must be intellectually curious and have the desire to quickly develop "generalist" knowledge. The role is a key feeder to careers reaching the highest levels of the firm

What you will do

- Learn and execute Gartner's proven methodology for conducting world-class research that helps identify best practice solutions to many of today's biggest business challenges.
- Analyze and solve business problems using root cause analysis, hypothesis generation, survey design, benchmarking, and other qualitative and quantitative methods.
- Conduct research by speaking with senior executives, academics, industry experts, etc. and conducting wide-ranging secondary literature searches.
- Collaborate on creation of key research deliverables, including but not limited to: large research studies, white papers, case studies, presentations and webinars, guidebooks, templates, how-to guides, or custom research requests.
- Be a key member of the research team and contribute to the entire project life-cycle - from conception to completion and presentation.
- Develop a deep understanding of the executives' workflow to create actionable and insightful content.
- Closely collaborate with peers and senior stakeholders in India, the US, UK and Australia as a part of global research initiatives.
